Now, use your face instead of credit card to pay. MELBOURNE, July 23: No more swiping cards! A new technology that allows customers to use their facial features instead of swiping a credit card to purchase goods has been developed by a Finnish company. The technology provided by Uniquel, works by recognising the customer's face and then linking it to the individual's bank account. So instead of swiping a credit card to purchase goods, the customer gazes into a camera. Uniquel claims its service is secured with military-grade algorithms. The Australian reported. Uniquel's Ruslan Pisarenko said the technology - which is due to roll out next month - has the ability for transactions to be completed instantly and can even distinguish between identical twins, 'News Limited Network' reported. According to Pisarenko, "the face is a PIN and it's more like a complete way to identify a person." "But in some cases where the system is not 100 per cent accurate, it will ask a person to input their PIN as security," he said. (PTI)
