About The Bahu Fort-

The Bahu Fort located at the foot of Bahu Temple and some residential areas of Jammu city. Something on the lines of Mughal Gardens in Kashmir Valley, the fort is covered by shaded walks, formal gardens, riding mazes, bar baris, sugarcane and orange juice, barfi-jalaibi, golegapay, aaloo-cholay, merry slides and turning boards which are organized during the festival. For eating, there are large numbers of stalls selling ice-creams, laddu, malai, saffron, orange and prices which are fixed by the market value. A small band of people has been appointed for the purpose of ensuring law and order on the occasion.

About Bagh-E-Bahu-

Although Jammu city has a long history and has witnessed the coming and going of many empires and dynasties in the past, the most prosperous period of the city was in the time of King Satpal (AD 1018-1081). This period is also known as renaissance period because of the great art, architecture, commerce, government and development of the city during this period.

The city is divided into three parts: Old Jammu (the walled city), New Jammu and Bagh-e-Bahu. Old Jammu has several historic monuments, including the Bahu Fort, the Jammu Shakti temple, the Hari Parbat hill, and the Hari Parbat hill, which are all located within the walled city. These monuments are visited by many tourists who come to pay obeisance to Mata Vaishno Devi and to secure her blessings. Now a days many langars are arranged for the Navratras, a large number of pilgrims visit this temple to worship the Bawe-Wali-Mata and to take blessings of Mata Vaishno Devi.

About Maha Kali Temple:
